MEXICO NOT SEEKING A CAUSE OF WAR

SHE WANTS TO BE LET ALONE FIGHT ONLY TO PROTECT SELF

Mexican Secretary Says His Country Not Seeking War—Charge of Intervention In Nicaragua To Antagonize the United States Held Groundless, Says War Talk—Protection Would Be Only Incentive To Resort To Arms With the U. S. He Declares.

In a statement given out Tuesday night at the Mexican embassy, Aaron Saenz, Mexican secretary of foreign relations, branded as "groundless" the charge that Mexico has intervened in Nicaragua to offset the policy or interests of the United States in that country.

Discussing application of the new Mexican petroleum and land laws, he said that Mexico had "freely and repeatedly declared that neither with the enforcement of her law in the matter of petroleum, nor with the enforcement of any other law, shall she in violation of an international duty fail to recognize rights legitimately acquired by any person."

Senor Saenz, who refrained from making direct reference to President Coolidge's message to congress of Monday, said that elements hostile to the Mexican government were seeking to misrepresent Mexico's Nicaraguan policy and to make it appear that application of the petroleum laws would result in the ignoring of prior rights legitimately required by an American citizen.

"Any person familiar with the strength of Mexico as compared with that of the United States," he added, "will understand that it is absurd to suppose that Mexico wishes to face the United States in a military way."

"Mexico is not bound with any other country nor has any agreement which may compel her to unite her strength or her interests with those of other countries. Neither will she voluntarily go to war with any country excepting in the case of self defense, should she be the object of an aggression because then she would have the inevitable duty of doing her utmost to maintain her independence."

As to Nicaragua, Senor Saenz said it was evident that Mexico had no interests whatever in that country, nor political views of any kind, nor any aims of territorial expansions, nor any Mexican properties or commercial interests to protect.

"Therefore, Mexico in this regard has nothing to do in that country," he continued, "and naturally she only entertains spiritual feelings akin to all the countries of the same culture."

The reasons that prompted Mexico to recognize the government of Mr. Secasa have been already set forth by President Calles in several statements published by the press. This recognition was asked in a principle of justice and respect for the constitutional order of the other countries; such attitude, however, not even has the credit of being her own, but agrees with the same policy followed by other nations."

As to the petroleum and land laws, the Mexican foreign secretary said that his government had "invited the United States to point out cases in which such violation may have incurred, promising to administer full justice in each case."

"Mexico firmly believes that nothing more can be asked from her," he declared and added:

"Mexico in the present case has not failed to fulfill her international duties as a member of the family of nations. The legal remedies provided by the laws of the country are open to those who consider themselves entitled to them, even tho no threat pends upon foreigners or their interests notwithstanding the intense anxiety felt in the international political atmosphere and the campaign thru the press which undoubtedly tends to upset the public opinion at home and abroad."

WHISKY TESTER.

The customers of bootleg establishments in Cleveland not only want the booze, but want everything that goes with it. In the last few days the bootleg accessory business has been booming in Cleveland.

It seems that someone has invented a whisky tester which will determine whether the booze is pure or poisonous. They are selling at $11 each, and, hundreds have been sold in the last few days, it is said.

Each machine is guaranteed to protect the user from poison liquor or your money back upon request.

The year of 1926, was all wet. Not figuratively but literally.

Emery referred to the month of October during which it rained everyday but one, the wettest month in the history of Cleveland.

"Normal precipitation," Emery stated, "is determined by striking a mean average precipitation for each month of the year."

MA FERGUSON MAKES RECORD AS PARDONER

Sets Mark Never Before Approached in History of the Lone Star State.

Trial of all cases in Bexar county, Texas, was suspended Tuesday as a means of stemming the flood of pardons being issued by Governor Miriam A. Ferguson.

A motion by District Attorney C. M. Chambers, continuing all criminal cases until after Governor Ferguson retires from office January 18, was granted by Judge W. W. McCrory.

The prosecutor acted upon learning that a man convicted last week had received a full pardon.

"A trial in any criminal case at this time where a conviction is gained would in all probability, be set aside by pardon granted by Her Excellency, the governor," Chambers motion read.

At Austin Mrs. Ferguson continued to dispense clemency with a free hand. She granted 32 pardons and several paroles, bringing her total of clemency acts to 3,177, a mark never approached by any other executive in the history of Texas.

Repeal of the bill enacted by the Texas legislature two years ago, granting amnesty to former Governor James E. Ferguson, husband of Governor Miriam A. Ferguson, was provided in a measure introduced in the state senate by Senator Thomas B. Love, Dallas.

The amnesty bill restored to Ferguson political rights stripped from him when he was impeached as governor in 1917.

Love's bill declares the amnesty law violates the state constitution and "misrepresents the ideals and standards of official conduct of the people of Texas."

Mrs. G. Garner, of San Francisco, was granted a divorce after telling the judge that her husband cursed and struck her when she trumped his ace in a bridge game.

"Uncle Ben" Hodges of Poplar Bluff, Missouri, has just quit chopping railroad ties at the age of 111.

GOVERNMENT AUTHORIZES DENATURANT

Mellon Says Cannot Change Law—Wood Alcohol Must be Used in Industry.

Congress has required the use of poison denaturants for industrial alcohol, Secretary Mellon Tuesday informed the senate in a reply to its request for information on the subject.

"The treasury does not wish to use dangerous substances as denaturants" Mellon said, "but congress has imposed upon the treasury the duty of specifying an effective denaturant readily available to industry."

Wood alcohol is "the simplest denaturant" meeting the requirements of law, the secretary said, and while the treasury has been searching for years for a substitute, none has been found.

"The treasury feels, then" he declared, "that it has not the discretion, under existing laws to abandon effective denaturant in favor of one not harmful but ineffective."

As far as the senate's request for and correspondence exchanged between Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League and the treasury regarding the use of poison denaturants, Mellon advised that there was none. The only Anti-Saloon League correspondence on file in this connection, he said, was a recent telegram from Atticus Webb, Texas superintendent, protesting against the removal of poison from industrial alcohol.

While the senate was receiving the report of Mellon, one of his chief lieutenants, Assistant Secretary Andrews, in charge of prohibition enforcement, was explaining to the house ways and means committee the administration proposal for the purchase and manufacture of medicinal whisky.

The plan immediately drew the opposition of Representative Garner of Texas, ranking Democrat on the committee, who declared it not only would create a monopoly, but proposed a "gratuity of $6,000,000 to whisky speculators," who, he said, hold 80 per cent of present medicinal liquor stocks.

Wayne B. Wheeler in a statement said that Mellon's report "vindicates our position with reference to denatured alcohol."

"The limited number killed by wood alcohol in New York compared to deaths from ordinary alcohol," he added, "and the general use and demand for industrial alcohol by the industries proves the wisdom of the government's policy."

"Wood alcohol as a denaturant," Mellon reported, "labels the treated product to any one attempting to drink it as dangerous, and therefore constitutes the most effective means of accomplishing the requirements of section 10 of title 111 of the national prohibition act that the denatured alcohol shall be unfit for use as an intoxicating beverage."

The secretary also transmitted to the senate a letter from Health Commissioner Harris of New York City, reporting on the alcoholic deaths there which said that only "some" of 750 deaths in that city during 1926 from alcoholism were "possibly due to methanol (wood alcohol) or other substance employed to denature or medicate alcohol."

Harris added that New York City hospitals had 337 cases of alcoholism under their care between December 21 and January 4, but "only one was definitely attributed to wood alcohol poisoning." There were also seven deaths during the year from use of straight wood alcohol, he said.

The health commissioner complained that the information given in death certificates was "very meagre with respect to certain important points" and said other questions were involved in studying the fatalities "which I am not prepared to answer in a scientific dispassionate spirit."

PARTICIPANTS IN MONTREAL

Theater Disaster Wherein Seventy-seven Children Were Killed Sunday, Talk.

Montreal.—Graphic stories of the scenes in the Laurier Palace picture theater tragedy which took a toll of 77 lives are told by some of the survivors.

Antoine Girouard, aged 16, who was taken to Montreal General hospital with concussions and slight burns, went to the theater with his two brothers. They sat in the balcony.

"I noticed flames shoot up through a crack in the floor, and immediately everyone rushed from the balcony," said the boy. "I got safely down the stairway to within five steps of the bottom, when I was knocked down by the rush on the stairway, and fell, while people piled over me.

"Three dead boys were beneath me when the police raised me and above me five or six injured boys had to be removed before I could be reached. The stairway was blocked with the rush of the crowd, and people were lying about on the steps. While I was crushed and lying on the steps the firemen began to play the hose over us, and no doubt it was due to this action that most of us were not burned to death." Girouard will recover.

Ernie Fitzpatrick, aged 10, who lives two doors from the theater, was standing in the aisle of the balcony when the fire was discovered.

"Everybody was laughing," he said, "when we saw flames and smoke coming from near the first row of the balcony in the center. Some men were playing extinguishers on the fire and shouting to everyone that it was not serious. I said a prayer and started to climb over the other people."

Crawling over heads and bodies in the fighting mob on the aisle and stairway, Fitzpatrick made his way to the lobby, whence he was carried to the street, slightly affected by the smoke, but uninjured.

With the Fitzpatrick boy were Michael Murphy, aged 14, and Eddie Murphy, 12, a brother. Michael was the only victim of the three.

"You see, he was luckier than we were," Eddie explained before he had identified his brother's body at the morgue. "I was standing in the aisle when the fire broke out. I didn't see any flames, but there was a lot of smoke. I ran to the back of the balcony and I could not get out, but I climbed up on a ledge and a man standing on a little roof there with a handkerchief over his mouth carried me out of the window.

"There were only a few of us in the aisles when the fire started, but there were crowds of people, mostly children, standing in the rear of the balcony."

Were You Ever Guilty?

Rita, age five, enjoys assuming responsibilities in the art of cooking.

One Saturday permission was given her to bake the Sunday cake. It seemed to be a big success, but grandma was to pass final judgment on her visit the following day.

When grandma had tasted enough of the cake to form an opinion, she said, encouragingly: "Well, I'd tell the world that this is a mighty good cake, Rita."

Rita, bristling with pride, promptly replied: "I thought so myself, grandma, when I licked the pan yesterday."—Indianapolis News.

Pessimists

Mayor Walker, at a dinner in New York, said of a disgruntled group within the party:

"These men remind me of the book-keeper's wife.

"The bookkeeper, you know, complained one evening, as he pushed away his untasted plate of mutton stew:

"Gee, I wish I had an appetite for once!"

"Oh, go on, George!" his wife said impatiently. "What do you want an appetite for? It would only give you more dyspepsia."

HAYES AND COX

Only Other Governors To Serve Three Terms.

Vic Donahey is the only Ohio governor ever to be inaugurated three times consecutively.

Two chief executives, James M. Cox and Rutherford B. Hayes, served three terms each, but not continuously. Governor Cox served from 1913 to 1915 and again from 1917 to 1921 and Governor Hayes from 1868 to 1872 and from 1876 to 1878.

Return Jonathan Meigs was elected for three consecutive terms, but served only two. First chosen in 1807, he was disqualified because service on the federal bench in New Orleans was deemed to have made him a non-resident of Ohio, but was elected in 1810 and again in 1812, serving both terms.

Old-Time Food Production

After making various estimates the Department of Agriculture has decided that the time in our history when about half the people raised food and half the people bought it, was between 1820 to 1830. It would be safe to say that half of the people raised food for half of the population to consume at the end of the first quarter of the Nineteenth century, approximately 1825.

De Laval Oil

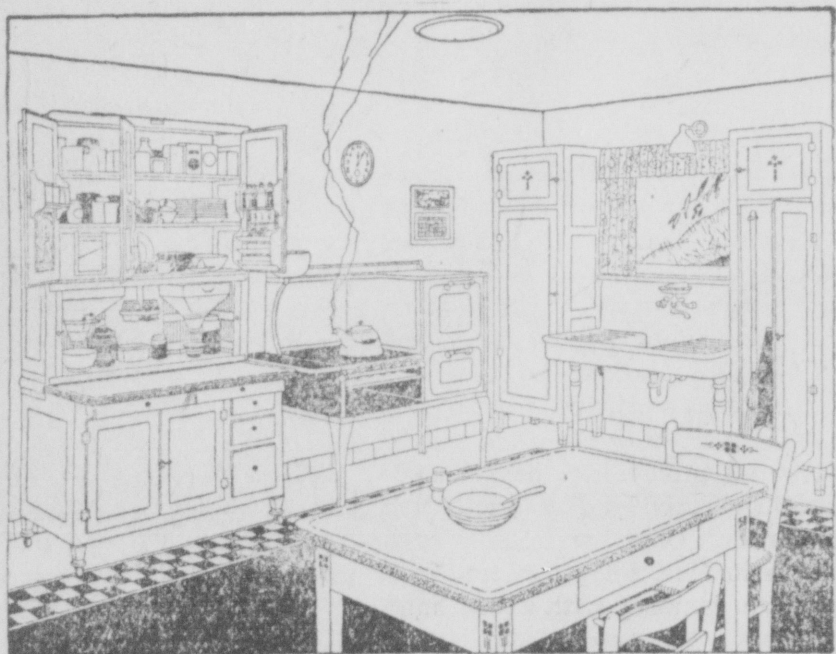

Don't experiment with various kinds of oil to lubricate your De Laval Separator. There is just one brand of oil which is exactly suited to the purpose, and hundreds of brands which will not do at all.

Keep the oil cup of your separator filled with De Laval oil and you will get the utmost in separator satisfaction. The machine will turn easier, and give longer and better service.

All light, high-speed machines run better when lubricated with De Laval oil. It gives them the protection they need and is, therefore, the cheapest oil in the end.

AMERICAN YOUTH IS IMPULSIVE

Rarin' to go, is the way the youth of today express themselves when approached upon the subject of war with Mexico.

To be sure some of the veterans of the World's War who have a clear idea of the meaning of war and of its hardships and terrors are not expressing themselves so freely, but even those who have vowed they would not go again when there was no danger of their ever having to go are now becoming a little squeamish about their remarks and are reconsidering.

Judging from this talk there is evidently no such thing as fear in the American youth of today. Despite the gruesome tales told them by veterans of the late war and we might say because of them the boys who would be called into service in case of a conflict with our neighbor, are really anxious to go.

There is no nation on earth where the youth are more patriotic than those of our own country and there is never the slightest doubt in their minds that the armies of Uncle Sam would ever come home from a conflict without the laurels. All the more power to them, but the universal draft which is so much talked of might put another meaning into the business of war. At any rate in case of war at this time coming so near the late conflict many of the errors of that affair would be avoided and many of the handicaps that were experienced during that period of such measures being taken by our government and of the trouble that might be experienced with the inhabitants of the mountainous country which is separated from us by the waters of the Rio Grande the boys are convulsed with laughter and remark that it would be an over night job. Such egotism is certainly a help and is not to be taken lightly as we all know that when we have made up our minds to do an act, no matter how large, the act is half done.

However, with all due respect for the fighting ability of the American youth and knowing full well that they will be victorious in any conflict in which they engage, if United States engages in war with Mexico they would have other foes to meet also, who would put a somewhat different color on the horizon.

CARD TABLE IS FINANCED BY TREASURY

To Facilitate Dry Law Enforcement, Mellon Says—"Exceedingly Fruitful," Secretary Says.

Washington. — Secretary Andrew W. Mellon has written to George S. Graham, Chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, that funds of the prohibition unit were used by A. Bruce Bielaski to maintain the New York Bridge-Whist Club as a blind to facilitate enforcement of liquor laws.

The letter was presented to the House today with an adverse report by the committee on the La Guardia resolution asking Secretary Mellon for detailed information in connection with the New York club.

Secretary Mellon wrote that Bielaski and Ralph W. Bickle were employed by the prohibition unit as "under cover" agents. He declined to reveal how they spent the money allotted to them, saying "that would involve laying up to violators details as to the means used by the Treasury in obtaining evidence."

"It has been the effort," the Secretary said, "to discover and assist in the prosecution of large conspiracies in violation of law. The work of Mr. Bielaski has been exceedingly fruitful. Through him many large cases have been brought to trial and convictions had."

European Standard Time

Most European countries use standard time based on one of the even-hour meridians as reckoned from Greenwich. This custom is followed by all European countries, except Ireland, Holland, Russia and Greece, which base their time systems on meridians of their capitals. In Russia railways are run on Pulkowa time and in Holland on Amsterdam time.

Cause of Thunder

It is not believed that thunder is caused by the inrush of air into a vacuum, but by the violent heating and disintegration of the air along its path, which produce a sudden and great expansion of the same nature as an explosion.

Use for Oyster Shells

Oyster shells are used for five purposes—"shelling," chicken shell, fertilizer, lime and road building. By far the most important use is for shelling. By this is meant the planting of them in oyster beds, in order that the spat may fasten on them.

Making of Matches

Gives Jobs to Many

Wadsworth, Ohio.—"Got a match?" A simple request easily complied with, but not so prosaic is the story of the making of the wood sliver with inflammable tip.

The match starts its journey to somebody's vest pocket in a towering pine forest, hundreds of miles away from the final center of manufacture. Forests, railroads and sawmills are owned by the match companies, which have great factories here.

One company owns a great tract of timber in the Coeur d'Alene mountains of Idaho. A company railroad, 24 miles long, takes the logs to the main line of the Spokane International railroad, which hauls them to Coeur d'Alene lake, where they are put into booms and towed to the company's sawmill on the Spokane river.

The logs are sawed into two-inch planks and seasoned for a year or 18 months. When ready for use, they are sent to the company's block plant at Spokane. Selected lumber there is cut into blocks 2½ inches long, which is the exact length of a match. The blocks are sent to the factory here, a 2,000-mile journey.

The first manufacturing step is to feed the blocks into a match machine, which cuts them up and forces the sticks into holes in an iron plate, holding 500 sticks.

Over sprigs and brushes the plates are carried and all the weak and imperfect ones are automatically culled.

Next comes treatment by paraffin and chemicals. Then the first composition is put on the head. The sticks pass over a roller, which turns in a box containing the composition. The ignition tip is applied the same way.

The use of phosphorus as an active ingredient in match making was barred by congressional act in 1913. The poisonous phosphorus used to affect the bones and the jaw of workers. Sesqui-sulphide of phosphorus now is used, which is nonpoisonous.

Earliest Measurements

Parts of the human body formed the first units of measurement, the inch having developed from the length of the thumb joint. The old measurement called the "hand" was the four inches across the human hand, and the span, nine inches, came from the space from the end of the thumb to the end of the extended little finger.—Exchange.

SAYS THAT POOR PEOPLE

WASTE MORE THAN RICH.

Extravagance, one of the national vices of America, is not confined to the homes of the rich, explains Kathleen Norris, well known novelist, in an article in this week's Liberty. "Indeed it is in the slum kitchens that one sees waste in its most shocking form," the writer says, "the kettle boils on madly for an hour after the teapot is filled; the electric light burns on un-noted in a streak of noon sunshine;
the uneducated and listless woman of the family slices away a quarter inch of good potato with each strip of skin, crackers are crumbled and thrown out
in paper boxes, cold cereals, cold rice, cold stale ends of loaves are allowed to mold and are tumbled into the always ready garbage bucket."
"A New York baker told me that he had tried for years to establish a market for stale bread—two loaves for the price of one," she points out. "But they won't have stale bread, nor skirts of last autumn's length nor lip-red except of the newest shade. Nobod-gives 'the poor' old clothes any more—they won't wear them."

Paris Returns to Slim Silhouette

Looser Effects Discarded in Models Designed With Spring in View.

The turning point has arrived in the evolution of this season's fashions in Paris. Until now, and since the August openings, writes a fashion correspondent in the Louisville Courier-Journal, the history of the mode has been largely a development and refining of the styles which were offered at the first showings. Subtle changes have occurred in silhouette, color and the incidental details, but they have all been a furtherance of the fundamental themes which opened the season.

Today, with the winter season at its full height, the model tides are changing and the smart Parisienne is beginning to incorporate themes into her wardrobe which include vital distinctions from what has gone before. In a word, the styles which will eventually blossom forth next spring are now in the making, and the newest models of the haute couture have been designed with spring in view.

Thus the house of Worth has departed from the accustomed path in its new robes du soir by placing greater emphasis on the draped white evening gown. Despite the fact that Worth's new draped models are exceedingly youthful in line they inculcate a decorousness which makes them as easily adapted to the mature figure as to the slim, girlish one. In the sport category the one-piece jersey frock with deep yoke and black taffeta cuff ties indicates this salon's preference for a softer type of sports costume.

Anna Changes Silhouette.

Anna has so changed her early silhouette that it bears little relation to its first outline. The waistline is made entirely normal in front, rising to that long-sought point from a low line in the back. The conforming hip-line, so important in this winter's fashions, still holds its place, occasionally screened by means of side drap-ings. Black remains the outstanding color, and there is apparently no intention to deviate from the high neckline which has been in vogue these several seasons.

Madeline Vionnet has become one of the ardent sponsors of the fitted bodice, particularly in evening gowns.
An earnest of this new tendency is a robe du soir in gold lace, having a snugly fitting bodice and a plain skirt, made full by means of a center front goilet. The Vionnet sleeve—that huge, dolmanlike effect with which the name of this designer has been connected since the August openings—is no longer so popular in the salon of its origination. The typical Vionnet sleeve in her latest models is quite straight and quite plain—indeed, it is almost mannish in its simplicity.

Lenief, whose color combinations are among the most unusual in Paris has adopted distinctly new mixtures.
On black frocks he is now using green

Illustrating Mode of Blending Two Shades into a Frock.

trimmings, while on an azure-blue wool coat he has used a unique shade of tomato red, both for the lining and for the incidental trimmings. A fancy coat of rose wool is edged attractively in a delicate gray. Peacock is used alone and unrelieved on a sumptuous velvet evening wrap having a deep hem of cartridge-worked mole-skin and an elaborate collar of the same pelt.

Premet Tailleur.

The latest Premet tailleur, designed evidently with an eye toward next spring, features the slender silhouette in a manner reminiscent of the famous pencil outline of two seasons ago. The jacket is invariably fitted and cut so sparsely that often it barely meets for fastening. The skirt is short and quite slim, with not even the faintest indication of the ancient hemline flare. Blue, navy, beige and gray are the leading colors among Premet's tailored models. An unusual feature is the sleeveless jacket which accompanies wool frocks. This jacket is of the same tone as the frock, but its material is different—thus green velvet will combine with green crepella in one model, while in an extremely popular costume, named Riviera, the simple, slimline dress is in salmon-colored jersey, while the paletot, as the jacket is called, is made of orange velvet.

Chez Jenny, who is always among the leaders in anticipating the next move of the mode, has, as the outstanding themes, galuchat collars worn in conjunction with severe Puritan cuffs and the introduction of gold and silver into informal frocks. Thus gold threads are run through knitted sweaters which are usually horizontal.

Black Chiffon Velvet Lined With Silver Cloth, Ermine Trim.

ly striped in at least three different tones, such as gold, silver and pink.
Sometimes the skirt which accompanies these sweater-blouses is in plaited lame, while the blouse often slips inside it. Knickers, which accompany these costumes, are often visible and are made of the same material as the blouse. In the more formal of Jenny's new models there may be seen also a leaning toward the touch of Midas.

Filligree Gold Clips.

In one striking instance filligree
gold clips move all around the edge of a bolero-sleeved jacket of summer ermine. Again, these same clips are used on an afternoon ensemble. They appear on the tiers of the black coat and on the gray frock which matches the coat lining. An interesting feature in Jenny's newest dinner robes is the use of the long sleeve, which is repeated in enough models to indicate clearly this designer's preference for it. Often chiffon capelets are posed over lame evening coats—again the metallic note—while one model, which is attracting favorable comment from all smart quarters, has both capelet
and sleeves made of a heavy gold lace, the sleeves being suspended from the capelet.

Drecol, while he has not broken openly with the current winter silhouette, is making ardent attempts to depart from the beaten path. His new models maintain fullness in the front of the skirt, undeviating straightness in back, combined with the faintest blousing, which is really not a blous-ing in the accepted sense of the word.
It is rather the result of a very snug bodice and a fuller skirt, the bloused effect occurring at the line of demarcation. Two tones and two materials are almost inevitable in the latest models offered by this house, and very often both themes are incorporated in the same costume.

Taffeta Is Prominent.

Elegance is more than ever the basis of the most recent Cheruit models. Taffeta is particularly prominent in daytime and dinner dresses, while the petal theme, so favorably remarked all winter, still retains its vogue and appears in velvet gowns and even in gold lame wraps. Jabots and loops, so typically Cheruit, are again adhered to, while the trotteur costume is most frequently expressed in duvetyn, much as it was at the first showings.

The eminent Lucien Lelong is offering foulard frocks accompanied by dark coats which are lined with the frock fabric. Throughout the new Le-long models tucks are so manipulated as to appear like very fine plaits. The slender silhouette is even a little slim-mer than it was last season, while black and black and white combined still hold their places. However, Le-long is showing increasing favor for the lighter shades of blue and various hues of duck, and among those to whom this designer is one of the leading prophets of the couture, this tendency is looked on as an earnest of a nearby cessation in the vogue for black.

WHAT TO DO WITH OLD

SAFETY RAZOR BLADES.

Altho the question of what to do with old safety razor blades has served as humorous material for many years, the question has its serious aspect, according to an article by Franklin Fargo in this week's Liberty.
"One of the best ways of solving the blade problem in the household," Fargo writes, "is to keep a jar of strong salt solution at hand and drop the blades into it until they corrode and may be thrown out without danger to anyone. Another suggestion is that each blade user shall replace the blades in the original package, take them to be resharpened, and then never call for them."

Pointing out that the man who discovers a practical way of re-using old blades will have his fortune made,
and that they have already been used for ripping cloth, for cutting corns and calluses, as a cigar-cutter, etc.,
the writer goes on to say; "The really simple way of disposing of blades is to replace them in the container provided, and, when it is full, to place it with refuse, to be carted away or burned. The furnace disposes of millions of blades."

ANTI-SPLASHING DEVICE JUST INVENTED

Signor Tita Messina of Rome has just invented a new device for cars, which has been tried with great success. Signor Messina is shown in his car, which is equipped with his anti-splashes. He caused a great sensation when he first appeared in the streets of Rome, Italy.

HORNBLOWER IS RANK NUISANCE

Excessive Use of Signal Is Mark of Amateur.

Excessive sounding of the automobile horn has become a nuisance. The thoughtless driver who places too much reliance upon the protective qualities of the horn may often frighten a person unnecessarily by giving a loud toot when close upon the unwary pedestrian.

There is no reasonable excuse for such use when, if at all necessary, the horn might have been sounded lightly before getting near the person crossing the street. Better yet, the motorist can observe due courtesy and slow down. The motorist who is thoughtful of the safety and rights of others can usually be relied on to use tact in sounding the horn.

Bombastic Blowing.

"Bombastic blowing of the horn may be a characteristic of the owner who is operating his car for the first few times," says H. Clifford Brokaw, technical adviser of the West Side Y. M. C. A. Automobile school, New York. "There may be some excuse for the somewhat nervous beginner who does not feel quite sure of his control. He has reason for calculating that people who may be walking on the highway will be more certain to get out of his line if he gives his horn plenty of exercise. The novice at driving can be excused for over-tooting."

"More experienced drivers sometimes fail to sound their horn when they ought. They think it advertises them as amateurs in operating a car. The best form in horn blowing lies in following the happy medium between too much horn noise and not enough. There are certain times when motorists ought to sound a warning in the interest of safety. This is a moral obligation. In general, the driver of an automobile should exercise common sense when it comes to his horn."

Toot Horn Near School.

"If there is any certain time when one can blow his horn with unrestricted freedom it is when nearing a public school just as it lets out its pupils. There are other times when a driver should be especially thoughtful not to blow much, as when going by hospitals, passing churches on Sundays and other places where people have a right to quiet. Late at night is another time when silence is golden."

"The driver who watches other motorists and pedestrians carefully will likely develop a sane horn program. If he is alert and if his direction and speed of travel is such that those ahead are reasonably sure to be out of the way before the driver arrives at the spot, there is no need of making a lot of noise. If there is the least possibility of danger instinctively the driver's foot should go to the brake pedal at the same time his hand goes to the horn."

"When one is driving in the country and desires to pass another car going in the same direction, it is both customary and safer to sound the horn once so that the driver of the car ahead can judge as to when and where he will give the follower his best chance to pass. Usually he will give way when signaled. If he does not give way and there is any doubt about his having heard the signal, it is good practice to sound the horn again."

County Traffic Officer Suggests "Golden Rule"
W. J. Berichon, Muskegon county (Michigan) traffic officer, wants motorists to get out and push rather than become idle spectators in time of accidents.
"When an accident takes place on a highway other motorists should first push the cars off the road," says Mr. Berichon.
"Records show that many accidents have resulted at night as a result of cars being left on the highways after accidents. There is no reason why other motorists cannot do a little pushing and keep traffic going."

Service Made Part of National Shows

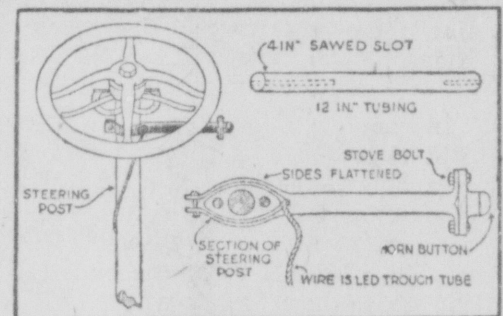

In the national automobile shows in January and February in New York and Chicago there will be separate sections for service equipment, that is, garage machinery and tools, and in the New York show commercial vehicles of the lighter tonnage will also be on display.

The enlarged show plans will bring a considerably increased number of manufacturing exhibitors into the expositions.

The commercial vehicle exhibits are to be supplemented by showings of parts and appliances for trucks. The service equipment sections, which will be provided with power so that garage machinery can be demonstrated to the trade and public, have already aroused much interest among manufacturers.

Mounting Is Convenient for Auto-Horn Button

The bracket illustrated, for mounting the horn button of an automobile in a convenient place directly under the steering wheel, is readily made from a piece of steel or brass tubing. This is perhaps the most convenient place for the horn button, unless it is placed on the steering wheel itself, which causes continual twisting of the wires, and is, therefore, not to be preferred. The tubing may be 1/2 inch in diameter, and is slotted for a suitable distance from each end. The end to go around the steering column will probably be slotted about 4 inches, and the other end, to fold out for attaching the button, about 1 inch. The two wires leading to the button may be twisted around the steering post or, better, led through a piece of conduit down to the dash.

The Horn Button May Be Mounted in a Very Convenient Position Under the Rim of the Steering Wheel by the Use of a Piece of Tubing.

A button so mounted is always within reach of the driver's finger except when turning very sharp curves, and even then it is quite easy to find in emergencies. The tube may be bent slightly upward to bring the button nearer to the rim of the steering wheel, if this is found to result in added convenience.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Backways Permit Faster Traveling on Highways

Many traffic experts do not share the popular belief that if car registrations continue to increase at the present rate there will be no road or street on which to drive in comfort. They point to a number of significant trends which they declare are serving to lessen congestion by distributing the traffic. To illustrate this point they cite a typical case where a motorist, formerly accustomed to taking two days to make a trip between large cities via the main highway, which took him through two of the largest cities in the country, recently made the trip in one day via the "back way." This man's car was on the highway one day as against two as on former trips. This meant one less car on the more heavily traveled highway.

AUTOMOBILE FACTS

The more brains a man has, the more he is inclined to stop, look and listen.

Old Dobbin could be taught to back the rig into a place at the curb in three lessons. Some automobile drivers never learn it.

It's a poor motorist that can't support a couple of ordinary filling stations.

AMUSEMENTS

Marshall Neilan, whose latest Paramount production, "Everybody's Acting" began a local run has every reason to feel pleased with his newest opus. It is a human and humorous little picture that tells a straightforward story with smoothness, sincerity and a wealth of colorful atmosphere.

Neilan really deserves a double-barreled salvo of applause, for he not only directed the photoplay, but wrote the story as well. Its background is that of the theater, and in the unfolding of the plot, we are given vivid, intimate glimpses of the backstage life of the average traveling stock company.

Whether or not, as has been rumored, Neilan based his story on a real life episode matters little. Certainly the central idea is plausible, the various incidents well within the realm of possibility and the characters true to life.

The author-director, incidentally, showed rare judgment in the choice of his players. Seldom has such a collection of seasoned favorites been assembled in one production. Betty Bronson is ideally cast as the wistful little orphan who is adopted by five god-fathers. She is charmingly natural as a girl of eight and just naturally charming later on as a miss of eighteen.

Ford Sterling, Raymond Hitchcock, Henry Walthall, Stuart Holmes and Edward Martindel acquit themselves with distinction in the roles of the fathers. Lawrence Gray makes a manly and romantic taxicab driver; and Louise Dresser is splendid as Larry's mother who divides her time between running her home and managing a big business organization.

The plot revolves around Betty who grows up under the loving care of her foster fathers, knowing nothing of the tragic circumstances surrounding her parentage. It is Miss Dressed, who, in an effort to break up the romance between Betty and Larry, uncovers the unpleasant fact that Betty's father murdered her mother and was hanged for the crime. The ending is both logical and satisfying.

HARTMAN THEATER.
x x x x x x x x x

The coming to the Hartman theater, Columbus, on Monday, January 10, of "The Vagabond King" accredited the most thrilling of all musical plays for a one-week engagement, will unquestionably interest many music-lovers and theater goers in this community. This production, which calls for a cast of one hundred and twenty-five people but recently closed its New York engagement after a run of five hundred and sixty-seven performances—a record of which, it is believed, will stand for a long time.

As most people know who keep in average touch with important theatrical affairs, "The Vagabond King" is based on the beloved Justin Huntley McCarthy drama, "If I Were King" so successfully and brilliantly played by E. H. Sothern some twenty-five years back. And now, they have taken the play out of the Sothern repertoire and fashioned it into a lovely and glamorous romance in four acts and seven scenes, the latter depicting Old Paris during the unholy reign of Louis XI, 15th century. Rudolf Friml, the young Bohemian composer of the scores of "Rose Marie" "Firefly," "Katinka" and other popular successes, provided the lyrical setting for "The Vagabond King" and wrote what eminent music authorities agree is his greatest light opera. The score abounds in immense choruses, the now-famous "Song of the Vagabonds" being acclaimed the most thunderous ensemble ever composed for the stage. Other delightful song hits the play include "Only a Rose," "Love Me Tonight," "Tomorrow," "A Flagon of Wine," (done by 30 male chorus) and "Huguette's Waltz." A beautiful corps de ballet and an orchestra of thirty are other noteworthy features of "The Vagabond King."

There will be matinees at the Hartman on Wednesday and Saturday and the theater management announces that mail orders for this extraordinary attraction, sent in from this place, will have special attention.

"Sent to Coventry"

This phrase, which is in quite general use in English schools, means to ignore a person absolutely. The generally accepted explanation is that the citizens of Coventry objected at one time to the soldiers sent to the town. They treated them with silent contempt, and for a soldier to be ordered to the town meant little less than a mild excommunication.

Artist's Inspiration

The English painter, Sir Joshua Reynolds, was the first artist to represent a scene from the "Divine Comedy" in his picture of Count Ugolino della Gherardesca, whose horrible death is recorded in the twenty-third canto of "The Inferno."

Sun's Effect on Earth

From the earliest times sunlight has been considered an important aid in the preservation of health. The ancient Greeks and Romans exposed their naked bodies to the sun in the open air to recruit mental and physical energies. Exposure to the sun's rays was always adopted by the physicians of those times as a remedy for many affections, "especially dropsy, inflammation of the kidneys and paralysis."

SHORT STORIES OF THE BUCKEYE STATE

First Catholic Church in Ohio.

Senator M. B. Archer of Noble county, who recently represented that district in the legislature, laid claim for his county, to the first Catholic church established in Ohio. The little organization has had a precarious existence, but, according to the senator, it has been continuously active from 1803-4 to the present time and is known as Mt. Michael's church.

An interesting little piece of family history is connected with the story. Senator Archer is descended from James Archer, who came from Ireland and settled first in Virginia, but moved into Ohio at the date given above and settled on the east fork of Duck creek, now in Noble county. He had six sons, three of whom adhered to the faith of their father, Roman Catholic, and three became members of the church of a Methodist minister who had married one of their sisters.

The elder Archer was devout and from the time of his coming into Ohio had conducted services in his family according to the rites of the Catholic church. There being no other adherents of that faith in the new settlement, no priest could be secured to look after their spiritual welfare, but from time to time, and for some months at a time, a priest would come for temporary religious work and to teach the children from a parish in Virginia.

When first established, this pioneer Catholic church, if such it is considered to have been, was in Washington county; later was placed in Monroe county, and when Noble county, the last one in the state to be established was organized, it was placed within its boundaries.—J. H. Galbraith in Columbus Dispatch.

Crepe de Chine Frock
With Gold Embroidery

This charming afternoon frock for winter wear is of plum colored crepe de chine, with all over gold embroidery. The skirt is also of plum color, and affords a very charming outfit.

Chiffon Stockings Now

Made With Woolen Soles

Chiffon stockings are now being made with woolen soles of the finest kind of cashmere. This extra section comes well within the shoe line, so much so in fact that the stockings may be worn with the lowest cut sandal pump without the slightest danger of the device being apparent. Even to the touch this reinforcement is hardly discernible, due to its fine weave and perfect blending of colors. All the new winter colors are included, the selection making them highly desirable for general wear with any of the low-cut shoes.

Glove-silk bloomers are gradually and surely becoming substitutes for petticoats, especially with woolen frocks where bulk of any kind is to be avoided. This season the plainer models, with single shirring or heading at the knees, take the place of the more frilly types of the past. Another important feature of the new bloomers lies in the fact that they come in an unusual range of colors to include all the underwear, stocking and fabric shades.

Chevette is the name of the leather used in the new washable sport gloves of French make. The gloves are by no means plain, for the gauntlet cuffs that afford protection are finished with bone buttons in link form.

Some of the newest black suede bags are shown with initial clasps in diamond shape. At first glance it appears as though the slight little cuts and dashes were part of a design which on closer inspection reveals a monogram. These monograms give the bags in question a more formal note and at the same time protect the suede from marking where it is so much used.

Vanity cases for evening use, copied from the very expensive ones of platinum and white gold, are being duplicated in a white composition and imitation precious stones.

Two-Piece Frock Still

Holds Its Popularity

Two-piece frocks have become almost a uniform with women who keep apace with fashion. Although they vary slightly in detail from season to season, the general silhouette remains the same and they are characterized by the same qualities of chic and practicability that have given them their prestige. This year the difference between models of the present and the preceding season lies principally in the emphasis given to a bloused line above the waist. In some instances it is quite marked and the lower part fits snugly over the hips.

The new silhouette naturally demands fabrics which are adapted to it. Crepe satin, supple velvet, and metal brocades amazingly pliable in texture, are chosen for frocks of semi-formal and formal aspect, which may be donned early in the morning and be appropriate for daytime occasions; fine cashmere jersey, velveteen and the soft-finished twills are excellent.

Shoes Matched to Hat

In the fashions of today shoes are matched to hats. Very attractive are pumps with a single strap made of fine straw in shades of sea green, parchment, bois de rose and white. They are trimmed with kid in a harmonizing color.

Fashions in Sleeves

Designers have given themselves full sway from wrist to shoulder and no combination of puffs or decorations is unrepresented in the styles. Even the shoulder puffs which were a feature of the late '90s have made their reappearance in modified form.

Druggists' Mortar Old

The druggists' mortar, which has come down to modern generations almost unchanged in shape, can be traced back to prehistoric times. The mortar in its present shape was used centuries before medicine was known as an art, and was used to crush hard bodies. It was used by savages as well as civilized peoples.

Lava Blanket Takes

Long Time to Cool

The last lava flow from Mount Mauna Loa—on the island of Hawaii—occurring nearly five months ago—is still so hot that it has not been possible to dig away that portion which buried the government road at Hoopuloa to restore the old asphalt macadam highway.

That was an interesting bit of information presented by Hugh Howell, one of the Engineering association's members, in a talk at one of the organization's luncheons.

It will be several months hence, it is estimated, before the lava which poured forth from one side of the famous volcanic mountain in spectacular fashion will have cooled sufficiently to permit restoration of the original road, Howell said.

That is due to the remarkable insulating qualities of the outer coating of lava until it has cooled. It took the Alikia flow, which occurred in 1919, a comparatively short distance from the recent outburst, a full year to cool, Howell said.—Square and Transit.

South Converts Own Cotton

In 1890 the South used in its own industries 200,000 bales of cotton, but in 1925 the number of bales manufactured in sight of the cotton fields was 4,000,000, showing the tremendous increase in industrial activity in the South. Last year there were 17,000,000 active spindles in the southern mills against 16,000,000 active spindles in the North. In 1900 there were only 4,000,000 spindles in the South against 14,400,000 in the North.

Modern Methods

Add to Profits

Farm Income Can Be Materially Increased by Addition of Machines.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

That farm profits can be materially increased by the application of machinery and new methods is the conclusion of the advisory council appointed by Secretary Jardine in connection with the Department of Agriculture's study of mechanical farm equipment. After a year's work the council met with Secretary Jardine in Washington recently to discuss progress and future work.

Undeveloped Fields.

The report shows that there are undeveloped fields in many directions, over 400 projects being listed for study. Important co-operative work is now being done to develop machinery and methods to eradicate the European corn borer, which has become a national menace. Other outstanding projects which it is hoped will be undertaken soon are the further extension and application of the combined harvester which harvests and threshes grains in one operation, the development of bigger and better adapted power-driven units for corn planting and cultivation.

The council finds that too little attention has been given researches on farm mechanical equipment by state and federal experiment stations. More than four billions of dollars is now invested in this item and over three hundred and thirty million dollars was expended in 1925. On the average, power and labor costs of farm-crop production make up about 60 per cent of the total costs. These facts indicate that even minor improvements in farm machinery will result in large savings.

Jardine Approves Work Done.

Secretary Jardine expressed approval of the work done and stressed the importance of the co-operating agencies carrying it forward as rapidly as possible. Progress has now reached a stage where specific problems can be assigned to different agencies for solution.

The advisory council was appointed by Secretary Jardine in May, 1925, for the study of research in farm equipment. It is composed of representatives of the National Association of Farm Equipment Manufacturers, the American Society of Agricultural Engineers and representatives of the Department of Agriculture and has been working under the direction of J. B. Davidson, senior agricultural engineer of the department.

REPORT ON OHIO'S CANNING INDUSTRY

Government Issues Statement On Acreage and Amount of Crops For Canning.

Columbus, Jan. 11.—The extent of the food canning industry in Ohio is shown in a report prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture, and made public here today, relative to the production of crops for manufacturing purposes.

In 1926, 26,380 acres of sweet corn was put out in Ohio compared with 34,520 in 1925, which was an abnormal year in the corn canning industry. The average yield was 2.7 tons per acre compared with 3.2 in 1925. The total value of the crop in 1926 was placed at $722,000.

Four thousand, two hundred and ten acres were put out in 1926 in green peas compared with 4,850 in 1925. The yield was .7 tons per acre compared with .5 in the previous year. Tons produced numbered 2,900, and the total value of the crop was placed at $184,000.

Sixteen hundred acres were put out in cucumbers for pickles against 2,250 acres in 1925. The output was 55 bushels to the acre compared with 72 in 1925. The value of the cucumber crop in 1926 was placed at $79,000.

Of tomatoes, 8,000 acres were put out in 1926, against 8,560 in the previous year and the yield was 4.8 tons per acre compared with 6 tons in 1925. The value of the 1926 crop of tomatoes in 1926 was figured at $430,000.

Ohio is second among the states in the production of cabbage for kraut making, being exceeded only by New York. Last year 1,850 acres were put out in cabbage for manufacturing purposes in Ohio, compared with 1,410 in 1925. The average yield per acre was 11 tons, against 9 tons in the previous year. The value of the crop was put at $122,000.

Many farmers in Ohio have become virtually specialists in the growing of crops for canning purposes and these figures show the large income the farmers have derived from these crops. The consumption of canned foods is steadily increasing, due to the greater realization on the part of the public to their wholesomeness and convenience, and health-giving qualities.

North America Sinking

Scientists say that the North American continent is slowly sinking into the ocean, the rate being about an inch a year. At any rate, however, the scientists say the change is nothing for any one to become alarmed over, as changes of this kind have been noted with no cataclysmic effect on any considerable portion of the earth's surface since the time of recorded history.

"Hot Dogs" in England

Englishmen are learning the American language. They no longer ask for a sausage and a roll with mustard when they want a hot dog.—Boston Transcript.

Not All Bad Lands Desert

The Bad lands of South Dakota cannot, strictly speaking, be classed as a desert region. The term is somewhat misleading, as the land is fertile, except where it is so steep that vegetation is washed off. In level portions buffalo grass grows and supports great herds of cattle. Good water is usually found in shallow wells and considerable farming is carried on.

The Joke Turned

A motorist touring in Ireland one day met a native who was driving a donkey. Thinking he would have a little fun at the man's expense, he said, "My friend, what is the difference between your turnout and mine?" "Oh, not a great deal," promptly replied the Irishman. "Shure the donkey's in the shafts in wan and on the sate in the other."

Farm Hints

No farmer is a good citizen unless he is actively interested in the welfare of his community.

Lack of paint on the farm buildings not only makes them look ratty and shabby but it also lets them rot.

The successful feeder invariably feeds a variety—whether it be in our homes or in our feed lots.

The shrewd farmer makes the gas engine help him do the chores and thus saves time and money.

The men who get the lower cost of production are usually the better men; that's why they get the lower costs.

ROMANCE OF SEA RIVALS FICTION

Canadian Fireman Who Saved Titanic Babe Becomes Heir to Millions.

Toronto, Ont.—Heir to $2,000,000 and guardian of a girl of fourteen whom as an infant he saved when the Titanic went down in 1912 is the happy fate which, according to his own story, has befallen John James, a fireman employed in one of Toronto's pumping stations. A few days ago James left for England for the purpose, he said, of concluding legal formalities.

Among John James' associates his story is accepted at its face value, for they have known him for many years as a trustworthy workman and a man of his word. Among others there is skepticism pending his return from England with his millions and his ward.

John James' story in any case stands unrivaled among romances of the sea. Here it is in his own words:

"I had shipped on the Titanic as a seaman under the name of John Jones. I did not use my own name because of a previous disagreement at the company's employment office.

"When the vessel struck the 'growler' I took my station beside No. 8 boat. Receives Charge of Baby.

"It was as the passengers were getting into the boat that I received charge of the baby, who has been responsible for the events which have happened recently.

"A number of women had got into the boat. I remember they included Mrs. J. J. Astor and Lady Rothe, when a woman carrying a baby in her arms came forward. Her husband and two other little children were with her. She first handed me the child and then, on learning that her husband could not accompany her, refused to go herself. The other two children stayed with their mother, and I was handed a sum of money and an address in London, with instructions that should anything happen I was to deliver the child to that address. I was told I was keeping the baby for extra precaution. None of us dreamed for a moment the Titanic would sink.

"We lowered away and pulled off from the doomed vessel.

"Each hour I made each passenger take a teaspoonful of rum and I took some myself. It kept us alive, for the cold, following the proximity of the icebergs, was intense and I was dressed only in canvas breeches and jersey. I had not even shoes on. I had stowed the baby, wrapped up in my oilskins, in the boat's locker. Now and again it would cry and I moistened its lips with a little rum and water. That, in my opinion, kept it alive.

Picked Up by the Carpathia.

"It was terrible when the passengers in the boat realized the giant vessel was gone. The tragedy has been sufficiently written about, and it is enough for me to say that the next morning we were picked up by the Carpathia and that the baby was still safe and sound.

"On the Carpathia they tried to take the child from me, but I had given my word to deliver it to its grandparents and I meant to keep it. The child was well cared for, of course, and after we reached New York I took it ashore with me and then back to England, where I was met by the grandparents at Liverpool and handed her over to them. At the time I was well compensated financially, and after the Washington and Southampton inquiries, at both of which I gave evidence, I returned to my calling on the sea.

"The grandparents would write me and send me money on the Titanic's anniversary, but it was not until the war that I saw them again. It was about six years after the Titanic's sinking that I was in hospital wounded. When I was discharged I was given a fortnight's leave and I went to spend it in London in the Union Jack club. I had nothing to do there so I thought I would call for the first time on the baby's grandparents, for I had been often invited when in London to do so.

Surprised at Size of Home.

"I went down by bus and, of course, I was wearing my sailor's uniform. When I arrived at the address I was surprised at the size and imposing front of the house I had come to visit. Mustering up my courage I rang the bell and when the door was opened by a butler asked to see the lady of the house. He viewed me with apparent doubt and then remarked that the lady of the house was not at home.

"Take her my name," I said, "I know she will see me."

"He was about to close the door when a little girl walked from a room to the left of the great hall across it. She was dressed in white, and as she crossed she saw me. She stopped and looked at me for a long moment.

"What is your name?" she asked me, and I told her.

"Martin," she said, "kindly let the gentleman in. I know him and grandmother will see him."

"I was taken inside, where an old lady was sitting reading. I introduced myself and to my consternation she kissed me.

"Send for Mrs. Martin," she ordered the butler. "Mr. James will stay with me."

the whole of my fortnight's leave was spent in that wonderful house. Each day we would drive to the theater or some entertainment or other, while I met many people at her home. You can guess I was not entirely comfortable, but I gradually got used to the new luxury and my leave expired almost before it had begun, so to speak. Then I went back to the sea again. After the war, with £500 the old lady gave me, I came to Canada and started my new life here."

Now, according to James, the grandmother is dead and he has been notified that he must assume guardianship of the child and is heir to an estate that is valued at $2,000,000.

An embarrassing change in his mode of life is entailed but James thinks he can best bridge the gulf by becoming a gentleman farmer, an old ambition with him.

In any case, he says, he will not abandon Canada or his friends at the city hall and elsewhere in Toronto.

Three Adrift 4 Days

Saved by Motorboat

New York.—A Southern Pacific liner, running between New York and New Orleans, stopped at quarantine for the first time in its 20 years of coastwise service because it picked up three men adrift in a motorboat off Miami. The presence of the men made it necessary for the liner to pass quarantine examination.

The three men, who gave their names as John Morey, Harry Switz and Roy Palmer, all of Miami, told Capt. Charles P. Maxson they were returning from Nassau when their motor went dead.

For four days they drifted, with many an anxious moment, as they saw passing vessels disregard their distress signals. For two days and nights they were without food or water, as the speedboat usually made the trip from Nassau to Miami in five hours, and was only lightly provisioned.

The liner sighted the disabled boat and rescued the men ten miles off the Hillsboro light, midway between Palm Beach and Miami.

Diamond "Kings" Fear

Diggers' Price Cut

London.—Diamonds soon will be as common as artificial pearls if the present unrestricted output from alluvial diggings continues, in the opinion of the South African diamond magnates, says a dispatch to the Daily Express from Capetown.

The correspondent says the diamond mine owners are perturbed over the increasing output of stones from the alluvial diggings, where individual seekers are finding plenty of diamonds and putting them on the market at prices below those charged by the De Beers syndicate.

Solomon B. Joel, Sir Ernest Oppenheimer and Sir Abe Bailey, mine owners, have arrived in Capetown from England with the hope of inducing the South African government to limit the alluvial output. Mr. Joel is a director of the De Beers Consolidated mines. He is a nephew of the late Barney Barnato, a poor Jewish peddler who went to South Africa in the early '70's, and made a large fortune in diamond and gold mines.

Shoos Pigeons Out of

Church After 50 Years

Milwaukee, Wis.—The age-old problem of ousting tenants without hurting their feelings is facing Rev. Arthur H. Lord and the vestrymen of St. James' Episcopal church, because the time has arrived, they believe, to ask pigeons to move from the steeple of the church where they and their ancestors have lived for 50 years.

Two months ago a steeple-cleaning expedition was carried on by Otto Gehrke, sexton, and three men. They took 108 bags or nearly three tons of debris from the floor of the tower. It was seven years since a similar job had been performed, according to Gehrke and the debris included skeletons of dead pigeons.

Reverend Lord wishes they would find new homes, but says they may use the steeple on cold days.

Salted Whales' Tails

Delicacy to Japanese

Tacoma, Wash.—Over in Japan there is no worry over the shortage of turkeys for the holiday season for during the last week 170,000 pounds of salted whales' tails have been exported to that country. The whale tails, in great demand there, came from the various whaling stations on the north Pacific Alaskan coast and represent a value of over $41,000, whereas a few years ago they were discarded or worked over into low-grade fertilizer.

Pays One Cent Rent

for Fruit Orchard

Toppenish, Wash.—John Hale came into a local bank this week and paid his annual rent of one cent for a 15-acre fruit orchard near here. He also called at the post office to buy a money order for the taxes on the place, his only outlay for a big crop harvested this year.

Years ago when Hale's father was a cayuse-riding pioneer in the Northwest he befriended a traveler. In return the son has been remembered and repaid in leasing the orchard for the smallest sum permitted by law.
